Jobs come back to Greater Salisbury

Numbers have hit and surpassed pre-recession high from 2008

JEREMY COX

It's like the Great Recession never happened in greater Salisbury. Well, not exactly. But according to a new report, job numbers have hit and surpassed their pre-recession high, which was set during the first three months of 2008. Somewhere between April and June '15, the metropolitan area—which sees the three Lower Shore counties of Maryland and Delaware's stomping grounds—registered all of the 9,000+ St. Conference of Mary and Delaware's stomping grounds.
